Half of the world's people now live in cities, and an increasing percentage of these are poor. What will Christian mission look like in the cities of tomorrow?

HopeStreet's Urban Mission Internship is a paid 6 or 12 month internship program for a student studying at an approved theological college.

Interns gain exposure to a variety of urban mission projects, and contribute to the life and ministry of one of HopeStreet's inner city churches. A mentor is provided for each intern

Ministry areas include:

- community development in housing estates
- evangelism in the urban context
- counselling and support for problem gamblers
- advocacy and a home for the homeless
- job training and support for the long-term unemployed
- sport and cultural programs for indigenous youth
